

test Immediately and conventionally loaded implants in the edentulous mandible

Objective: The aim of this current investigation was to evaluate clinical outcomes of conventional and immediate loaded implants and Dolder bars in the interforaminal region of the lower jaw after 5 years of clinical function.

Materials and methods: 160 implants were inserted in the interforaminal region. 20 patients of the control group were treated after a healing period of 3 months and 20 patients of test group were loaded within one week with Dolder bars and overden